Imagine the healing

Many kinds of loss can cause a child to grieve. Grieving children can feel lonely, and isolated, scared and confused. Their feelings can be intense and overwhelming at times. Camp Courage shows children what they are experiencing, while perhaps painful and sad, is a perfectly normal reaction to the loss of a loved one.

We know that a young person’s experience of grief is real. Their grief is unique to them and much different than that of an adult. Research indicates some children are at much greater risk for serious mental health issues if they are not allowed to receive some form of grief counseling. How we support children during this time has a lasting impact on the rest of their lives.

Together our Masters level clinician, Eileen Grover, Partners In Care volunteers, artist, Jennifer Poncia and the horses from Healing Reins Therapeutic Riding Center will provide support and direction for your child, helping them cope with their loss, while “memorializing” their loved one.
